We're a consultancy focused on growing the community energy sector

Community Energy Experts

Since 2011, Scene has been deeply involved in engaging communities across the UK with renewable energy.

Alongside our consultancy work, we have also carried out detailed market research on the technological, social and financial aspects of community engagement in commercial developments.

Building on our research and consultancy work, we have identified the key problems and barriers faced by developers that are serious about engaging communities. Our services have been carefully tailored for the needs of the sector.

Why involve the community?

Commercial developers and policymakers alike are paying increasing attention to the role of communities in energy projects.

Taking community engagement seriously can dramatically boost your planning prospects, and helps foster the pro-renewables culture that we need to get things moving.

Our services for developers include:

➔ Partnership Management

For some prospective projects, a successful partnership with a community can make all the difference. That's one reason why increasing numbers of developers are entering into joint ownership or joint venture arrangements with local community groups. Such partnerships can greatly improve your planning prospects, and are an excellent way to achieve genuine community support for your development.

Scene Consulting specialises in managing multiparty relationships, and are experts at facilitating partnerships with communities.

➔ Community Engagement

Successful community engagement is becoming increasingly important in the UK renewables sector. However, few developers have the requisite in-house knowledge or expertise to carry out proper community engagement. Scene Consulting specialises in carrying out a comprehensive range of engagement services for developers that take local communities seriously. Our services include:

- Organising community- and public consultations
- Marketing investment opportunities in your projects
- Communicating and structuring benefit arrangements
- Liaising between you and local communities
